Dear Brother's Name,

Hello, I hope you are doing well. I am aware about your upcoming Class 12th exams. I understand the anxiety that you must be having right now. I am writing this letter to give you a piece of advice. The final year exams of the secondary school are like any other exams. I want to tell you not to let this state of panic get over your mind. The purpose of writing this letter is to help you get through this time and not let you wander in the path of education.

You must remember that exams will keep coming and going. These might be the last exams of secondary school but these are not the last exams of life.

In the journey of life, you have to face numerous more exams. You need to learn how to go through these phases smoothly. Do not get overwhelmed by these situations. All you need to do is focus on the now and leave the worry of the future aside. The only thing you can control right now is your study pattern for your upcoming exams so you must do that and try to give your best. Leave everything else to fate.

Write back to me if you need any help with anything. Know that I am always rooting for you.

Yours Lovingly,

XYZ (Sender's Name)
