

MAIL to SELF

Dear Daughter,

When I had you in my arms for the first time, I gave a word to myself that I would not let anything happen to you. While you may feel I am overprotective, but your safety was above everything else for me.

I can hardly believe my little princess who used to ask me to chase monsters from under her bed has now become such an independent and strong woman. I am so proud of you darling. Your achievements have made me so proud. All my friends at the Ladies Club might have heard about your feats multiple times.

I feel sad that we cannot spend a lot of time in each other's company like in old times. However, when I see all the great things you are doing in life, I feel cheerful, Keep up the good work darling and continue to make us happy. Also, remember that come what it may, you will always have me rooting for you.

Your dad
